

Do you love singing, having fun and making new friends?

IMPs is an inclusive music club for young people where you can:

- learn to sing and sign
- learn to play instruments and use music technology
- write your own songs and music
- take part in public performances
- train to be a workshop leader as one of our IMPs Apprentices
- work towards your Duke of Edinburgh Award or Arts Award

IMPs is for young people aged 11+ who love making music. IMPs members include young people with a range of disabilities, siblings and friends of disabled members, young carers, and young people working towards their Duke of Edinburgh or Arts Awards.

You don't need any previous musical experience to join, and we support everyone to get involved and express themselves in the way that works best for them.

Music making is a fun way to build confidence and develop skills.

The IMPs Apprentice Programme gives young people the chance to train to become workshop leaders. And the IMPs Committee makes sure that young people have a say in how the project runs.
